On the morning of 25 April 1951, three plows towed by tractors plowed the landing field of the Perleberg airfield. Each tractor was operated by two civilian laborers. No construction work was observed and no construction equipment or material was stored at the field. Source believed it possible that building equipment and material were stored in the closed hangars. About 25 German workers were seen entering and leaving the field. The billets at the field were still occupied by Soviet Army troops and guarded. No Soviet Air Force personnel were seen in town or at the field. *

* Comment. According to previous reports it is intended to enlarge the landing field and to construct a runway with a hard surface. The plowing seen on the landing field possibly represents the beginning of this construction.
